Dancing is an essential aspect of social life, like music and the ability to speak are.

Dancing is an honest way of communication and expression. A body experience. An activity bonded to community- and self-experience. People dance everywhere around the world. Even children dance. They do it before they can walk and speak. The motion of all those muscles moving to the rhythm can be one of the greatest pleasures in everyday life. The same is with the emotion of the music and with experiencing the various ways to interact with the other people in the room. Dancing is a window - sometimes to open up, sometimes to get down and chill and sometimes for a look at the inner curtain. True & Livin'!
